Carbon Management Technology Conference: Sustainable and Economical CCUS Options

Sugar Land Marriott Town Square, Sugar Land, TX • November 17-19, 2015

<http://www.aiche.org/cmtc2015>

The Conference

The 2015 Carbon Management Technology Conference (CMTc 2015) will focus on Carbon Capture, Storage, and Utilization technologies that provide options for low greenhouse gas emissions while maintaining fuel diversity for sustainable growth. Technical and poster presentations working towards solutions to climate change, teamed with local site tours of commercial projects, make this a must attend event for engineers, geoscientists, academicians, policy makers, and government officials. We look forward to seeing you in Houston.

Sponsoring this conference demonstrates your organization's leadership in the CCUS field and facilitates engagement of experts across the engineering disciplines. CCUS is at a crossroads, with the 1st CCUS Demonstration Project coming online in 2014 at Boundary Dam and with costs escalating, and projects delayed or cancelled, such as Europe's Zero Emission Platform. Climate policy continues to strengthen through, for example the EU Emission Trading System, the US Climate Power Plan, and the gathering of a new UN agreement on climate change at COP21 in Paris, making it prudent to bring subject matter experts from around the world to present their approaches and solutions to carbon management. This conference is unique in its focus on industry and sustainable/economical CCUS options that are already being performed at large-scale.
